

Sierra On-Line acquires SubLogic flight simulation business.

BELLEVUE, Wash.--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Nov. 9, 1995--Sierra On-Line Inc. (NASDAQ:SIER), a leading worldwide developer of interactive multimedia software, announced today that it has acquired the flight simulation software business of SubLogic Inc.

Financial terms of the transaction were not disclosed.

"For the first three quarters of 1995, retail sales of flight simulation products reached almost $80 million," said Ken Williams, chairman and CEO of Sierra On-Line.

"Through our combination with SubLogic, we will be releasing a series of civilian aviation simulations that utilize our cutting edge Windows '95 based 3-D terrain technology. I believe this new line of products will represent the first serious alternative to Microsoft's Flight Simulator and a great complement to our successful military flight simulation business."

SubLogic located in Champaign, Ill., currently employs 12 people primarily in research and development.

Founded in 1979, Sierra On-Line is one of the original developers and largest worldwide publishers of interactive entertainment, educational and home productivity software. The company's corporate headquarters are located in Bellevue.

-0-

Sierra press releases are available on the Internet, via SierraWeb at <http://www.sierra.com>; or receive facsimiles of recent Sierra product press releases and financial disclosures via Sierra's News-On-Demand at 800/853-7788.

CONTACT: Sierra On-Line Inc., Bellevue
Michael A. Brochu, 206/649-9800
Scott Lynch, 206/649-9800, ext. 5295
Kathy Gilmore, 206/649-9800, ext. 5296